GERMANS RALLY TO SUPPORT OF POPULAR DOCTOR

Nominated by Nationalist Conservative Bloc to Replace Dr. Karl Jarres.

HAS PLURALITY OF 845,000 VOTES

Women's Votes and Heavy Poll by Stay-at-Homes Result.

BERLIN, April 27.—The people of Germany have rallied to the banner of Field Marshal Von Hindenburg and elected him president of the republic. He is the first president of Germany to be elected by popular ballot. He was nominated by the Nationalist-Conservative Bloc to replace Dr. Karl Jarres, who failed of election in the first balloting on March 29. His opponent was Dr. Wilhelm Marx, candidate of the Social Democratic Bloc. The third candidate was Ernst Thälmann, Communist. Von Hindenburg triumphed in his race for the presidency with a plurality of 845,000 votes.

Von Hindenburg comes to the chair once occupied by Frederick Ebert, who was chosen president of Germany in 1918, and who died in Berlin in 1925.

The women's vote played a heavy turn-out of former stay-at-home women elected the field marshal. Not until the returns from 23 out of the 25 election districts were received and tabulated could the outcome be determined, and from the close of the polls at 4 o'clock it was any man's race as the two chief candidates ran neck and neck in the official count.

The official provisional figures follow: Von Hindenburg 14,639,599; Marx 12,752,840; Thälmann 1,531,541. The vote declared invalid was 110,000.

An advance analysis of the vote indicates that Von Hindenburg carried heavily in East Prussia, where agrarian areas, polling 2,900,000 strong, voted in three sections that Dr. Jarres in the March election, carried. Dr. Marx carried the western three Republican parties that carried at that election.

It was the first county and new voters that added the field marshal to office.

The voting throughout Greater Berlin proceeded in an orderly fashion. Among the features were the heavy vote polled by Dr. Marx in Bavaria. These advanced voters were not sufficient to enable him to overcome the election of the Socialists in Saxony, where he had a strong following. In Saxony, Dr. Jarres was elected.

Power of the vote. No matter how the figures are interpreted, the election indicates the placement of this election demonstrates the growing power of Von Hindenburg's name. He has more than 14 million votes, more than a month ago when he was elected to the presidency.

Forecast: Mostly fair and rather cool. Temp.: 3 A.M. today: 28.

Chosen by Connoisseurs Since 1874

OUR fathers and our grandfathers knew good things—good friends, good books, good music—and particularly good wine. They made Bright's Concord the leading wine of Canada. For special occasions they brought from the cellar the dusty, cobwebby bottles and exalted the rare flavor, the inimitable bouquet which has always been associated with Bright's name on the label. That rare old flavor has never been sacrificed. You can enjoy it today if, when you buy Concord, you will insist on the name Bright's on the label.

"GUARANTEES" REQUIRED

The Australian Government is considering whether it should not in the interests of order pledge the incoming immigrants to obey the laws of the land. There is abundant and accumulating proof that sooner or later a demand of that kind will be made of every one who seeks admission to a country other than his own. Just taking it for granted that the immigrants will conform to the requirements of good citizenship is not safe and sane. Most of them do but the minority provide plenty of evidence that the general assumption is dangerous.

THE RED MENACE

Perhaps the next year in Europe is to be a event year. Bulgaria is already under martial law, with troops having been ordered to all quarters of the capital. French deputies were attacked Friday night by organized bands of communists. The "reds" everywhere are showing signs of awakening and making it increasingly clear that the stable part of the continent's inhabitants will have to protect themselves and establish security of life and property. Probably by force. What the communists have been trying with the hope that the leopard had changed its nature Moscow has been flooding the continent with its emissaries and its propaganda as usual. The general alarm may not come, but the menace seems to be growing rather than diminishing.

CONTROL AND CONSERVATION

Saskatchewan objects that should Alberta take over control of the natural resources and exploit the forests for what revenue can be got out of them, the natural resources of the whole prairie country would be affected. That the timbered areas of this province help to cause rain, fall, and conserve the water supply to feed the eastward running streams is no longer a matter of conjecture. Point is given to the objection from the neighboring province by the fact that the Dominion is not at present going and has not in the past got along very well in paying for administering them. If Alberta sacrificed a million and a half dollars Dominion grant for the privilege of managing the forests, it is a fairly probable that forest conservation would have to give way to financial needs and that the timber would be slaughtered for revenue purposes regardless of other consequences.

THE EXPORT CATTLE TRADE

Twelve more carloads of cattle left Edmonton Friday for Chicago. Despite the exactions of the export shipping combine the export trade continues to live, though not to flourish. Fewer pre-war rates the going cars would undoubtedly be multiplied, and more of the wealth in the province brought into to produce pasture and winter feed for stock. Exporting live cattle is not the only way to utilize the Alberta stock. It is better to convert them into beef at home, using up the roughage and coarse grain and securing all the economic benefits of the processes of fattening the animals and turning into finished food products. But if British farmers want feeders and are ready to pay a price that would reward Alberta farmers to supply them, the cutting of the export trade is not an alternative way of disposing of our surplus, and correspondingly encourage the enlargement of the surplus.

NOVA SCOTIA'S TROUBLE

The executive of the Farmers' Union at Nova Scotia calls on the Dominion Government to take immediate steps to grapple with a situation in which human lives are at stake. To wit, the situation in the coal mining areas of Nova Scotia. The executive apparently overlooks the fact that Nova Scotia is a province that it owns the coal deposits which form the basis of the mining industry, that it is responsible for the conditions under which the industry is carried on, and that it has not asked the Dominion Government to intervene. When such request is made action will be taken that has already been stated in Parliament. Until the request is made the Dominion Government could only interfere by trespassing on the field of provincial authority and setting a precedent which would compel it to do the like in future whenever a strike or lock-out produces serious conditions anywhere in Canada. Nor is it apparent that intervention from Ottawa would bring about the peace which the Nova Scotia Government has not been able to achieve. Until help is asked for it will be better to leave the authority that is on the ground and most familiar with the circumstances to deal with the situation.

FIERING FROM ALL SIDES

The Opposition member for South Vancouver on Friday gave a fine example of the "all round" criticism to which the fiscal policy of the Government is being subjected by its critics. Mr. Ladner approved the continuance of the money-lending Merchant Marine bill, but at the same time he refused, and called for a thorough investigation. That is putting the Government from all sides. The South Vancouver member wants the taxpayers made to pay deficit on the ocean service which happens to largely benefit his own constituency. He wants the taxpayers relieved of their burdens. He wants the tariff arranged so as to cut off the largest revenue the Government draws from indirect means. But while services such as the Merchant Marine are continued, human taxes are cut down. And if the tariff is made non-productive of revenue, how can the Government avoid boosting the income and other forms of taxation? Mr. Ladner is no more inconsistent than the speakers in the Opposition who are a way to bring out the absurdity of such criticism.

distory demands. Large expenditure, low taxation and a high tariff will not go together. We can have any one of them. But we cannot have any two of them at the same time. To demand all three of them is about the limit of unreasonable partnership.

THE COMBINE AND THE PUBLIC

It is quite touching to note the tender solicitude with which the shipping combine for the Canadian public, as reflected in evidence given by representatives of the steamship companies to the special parliamentary committee. One of the members of the committee, Mr. D. J. Macdonald, who he "hates to contemplate" the conditions which would follow if the Petersen contract were entered into. Other companies he said, would have to meet it. Government-controlled rates and there would be "general demoralization." The moralization of the rate-hosting monopoly now held by the combine is no doubt a condition to be contemplated with distress by the gentlemen who are fortunate enough to share in the spoils. But why the public should be invited to shudder at the prospect and imagine the possibility of a merger of companies is not at all clear. Yet that seems to be what they are invited to do by this and other witnesses. There is nothing peculiar in the fact that the combine usually gets the better of the witnesses when it comes to viewing the relation benefits and delude themselves into the notion that they are conferring blessings upon the ungrateful public while more that offset the price they charge for the service. It seems to be the fond delusion of the shipping companies that the monopolistic organization they have constructed will be able to carry on the carrying on of trade and the prosecution of productive industry on profitable basis. That being the case it is high time that the Petersen contract or some other means of breaking the correctness of that view were adopted. If the country cannot do business under the fatherly guidance and protection of the shipping trust the sooner we find that out the better.

As a further contribution to the inquiry the same witness said that while shippers do not sit in at rate-fixing pools, of course, their representatives are given most careful consideration. For the reason that "without their good-will we would go broke." That sounds well, but it is a fact that the combine is not a victim. Canadian produce does not go to the combine. It is the combine that is the victim, because the Canadian farmers like the stockholders in the shipping companies and want them to make money. The wheat and beef goes across the water, but the combine is the victim, because only vessels available. And the rates charged are paid not from good will but of necessity. It may be ungrateful on the part of Canadian shippers to feel that way, but from their point of view the rates which are charged by the combine it is to be suspected that they would ship their wheat and beef on non-combine ships if they could. It is a pity that the shipping combine does not owe its dividends to the good will of the patrons but to its death grip on ocean traffic. It is to be suspected that the combine is a fine disregard to whether or not it profits from its ways. The attempt to represent the merger as a public benefactor which is unappreciated or badly misunderstood is trying to disguise its only a bit of light caught in the money that can be extracted out of the overseas trade. If it has functioned with any real success single to that purpose, with financial results completely satisfactory to the shareholders and indirect consequences which have gone far to make Canada a prosperous land, it is difficult to see why it may be for the parties interested to believe that the conditions after the trust has been "busted." This particular witness seems to have no doubt.
